GOULD CAMERA CLUB HOLDS

ANNUAL EXHIBITION On Monday, June 4, the Gould Academy Camera Club opened its third annual display of work done by members during the year. The prints will be on exhibition in room 1-6 on the first floor of the main building until June 11. With the assistance of Mr Foster, the club's faculty advisor, the members have completed 42 salon prints. These, together with prints of various school activities, comprise the 1945 show. The photo subjects are varied and interesting, making this the finest show during the last three years. Visitors are welcome three years. Visitors are welcome at any time up until noon of Commencement Day, June 11. The 18 exhibitors of salon prints are flar-lan Blake; Leland Brown; Martin Bovey, vice-president; Gordon Bowman; Hollie Bucklin; Larry Clement; Robert Foster, president; Gayle A. Foster, faculty advisor; Paul Newton; Martin Noyes; Patsy O'Brien; William O'-Brien; Freeland Savage, secretary: visor; Paul Newton; Marilyn over to a member of the service and Mrs Olive Lurvey uttender the Noyes; Patsy O'Brien; William O'- who would otherwise not receive supper and installation of officers are request this type of mailing to the Stetson and Edwin Swain.

CITIZEN HALF CENTURYOLD

On June 5, 1895, the first issue of the Bethel News was published by A D Ellingwood in the same quarters now occupied by the Citizen. The first number was a four page eight column sheet, and presented good showing of local news, besides the first of a series of articles by J G Rich.

Mr Ellingwood with the able assistance of his wife, Lena B Ellingwood (who for many years was a prolific writer of fiction,) kept the enterprise going and growing in enterprise going, and growing, in spite of limited facilities. The fol-iowing year on June 10 was published a 12 page Centennial edition which was well written and printed, and is a source of valuable date. concerning the townspeople of that time. In September 1897, E.C. Bowler of Palermo bought a half interest in the business later becoming sole owner. The paper continued under his management until January 1913, during which time he started The Rumford Citizen (1906) which was printed in the News plant, and in 1908 consolidated with the News as the Cxford County Citizen. In this period extensive mechanical advances iod extensive mechanical advances were made including the addition of several presses and linotype, said to be the first installed in a New England country office. From 1913 to 1920 the newspaper was owned and operated by Fred B Merrill, who sold to David M Forbes. Since November, 1927, the business has been conducted by Carl L Brown.

time when orders came for the time when orders came for the march from the prison camp. Col Alger said that the journey was much like the retreat of Napoleon from Russia with the throng of prisoners and guards added to the previous traffic. With a lack of thorough planning the suffering marchers were forced to stay among the cattle, sheep, pigs and horses in barns each night. Finally forced to drop out because of dysentery, he was later accompanied by guards to the point where his comrades were to be taken. This being too near the American lines he was finally placed in the British camp where he was first committed two years before. After a few days reunion with his fellow prisoners, liberation followed and they were able to see the American they were able to see the American troops with their vast equipment, much of which was greatly changed, especially in the eyes of British officers who had been confined

Chinese Strike

With the Americans heightening pressure against the Japanese homeland. Chinese troops went over to the attack against enemy positions in China, assaulting coastal garrisons and the long overland corridor leading to Burma, Thailand, Malaya and Indo-China.

The Chinese attacks came in the wake of new Japanese maneuverings on the Chinese mainland, betraying the enemy's continued apprehension over possible Allied thrusts up through Burma and an invasion of the eastern coastal re-

In assaulting the Japs' long overland corridor stretching southward clear from Manchuria, the Chinese not only threatened the enemy's line of communication from Burma, Thailand, Malaya and Indo-China but also promised to choke off any flow of raw material from those naturally rich countries feeding the Nipponese war machine. In addition, the Chinese drove a string of former American air bases, which the Japs had rolled up last year in their effort to smash U. S. attacks.

Meanwhile, Flying Fortresses thundering out by the hundreds continued to raze Japanese industrial centers in the campaign to demolish the enemy's war production, with Tokyo being subjected to the same bombardment that laid Nagoya in

As a result of the B-29 attacks. huge areas of Tokyo lay smouldering, with the imperial palace and government districts and the main business centers heavily hit. While U. S. intelligence officers were careful not to accept the Japs' account of the damage too readily because of the possibility it might have been put out to decrease the future tempo of American assaults, returning Super-Fort fliers said they left huge fires behind them.

Het-up over the U. S. raids, the Tokyo radio declared that ". . . the enemy's inhuman atrocities had increased the Japanese spirit of hostility and they are firmly determined to fight to the last Japanese. . . ." It added: ". . . The stricken city burns with contempt for America."

SOCIAL SECURITY: Propose Expansion

Proposing that Uncle Sam provide for greater social security for U. S. citizens, Sen. Robert Wagner (N. Y.) and Rep. John Dingell (Mich.) called for extending coverage of the present act to 15,000,000 farm workers, professional people, small business men and domestics, and broadening benefits. Under a bill introduced in congress. Wagner and Dingell proposed increasing minimum old age payments from $10 to $20 a month for single persons and up to $30 for a worker with a dependent wife 60 or older. Funds permitting, unemployment compensation would be payable for 52 weeks instead of the present 26, with the weekly scale $5 to $20 for single persons a maximum of $30 for recipients with dependents. Women would receive a 12-week maternity leave with the same scale of

With all social security registrants forced to subscribe to the health insurance phase of the Wagner-Dingell bill, workers would receive compensation for payless periods of sickness or disability, and be allowed 60 days of hospital care under doctors of their own choosing. In addition, the federal government would participate with states in a longrange program for construction of health centers, hospitals and clinics in rural areas.

To finance the new act, Wagner and Dingell recommended an increase in social security taxes from 1 to 4 per cent each on em-

COLLABORATIONISTS:

Stand Trial In preliminary appearances before their real trials get underway, Marshal Henri Petain of France and Vidkun Quisling of Norway sought to relieve their stigma as Europe's two arch collaborationists by pleading that their actions were prompted by a determination to protect the welfare of their countries as much as they could. The opening hearings were dramatically flavored with Petain revealing that he would call upon Adm. William D. Leahy, former U. S. envoy to Vichy and now President Truman's chief of staff, to testify that he had actually opposed the Nazis, and Quisling defiantly defending his position. Writing to Admiral Leahy to testify in his behalf, Petain said: "You who have lived beside me during those months, you who have witnessed my efforts to restore France, you will help me to convince those who are accusing me . . . that I have never had any aim other than to live and protect them against the demands and cruelties of the German-occupying troops. . . ."

In assuming the position that he had striven solely to lighten France's load, Petain vigorously membership in the secret society, La Cagoule, working for German interests, and declared that its use of his name was unauthorized.

With no high Allied personality to try to fall back upon, Quisling had to stand on his own. He did, however, claim to have represented Britain in Russia for three years before the war and to have received the thanks of parliament for his efforts.

Declaring that it was necessary for him to explain all of the heretofore hidden international political events leading up to World War II to justify the course he took. Quisling was assured that he would be given such an opportunity when he comes up for real trial August 25. With lower lip curled under his pug nose, the big, bulky collaborationist insisted he had worked with Prime Minister Chamberlain and Hitler in an effort to avert the European conflict.

PLANE PRODUCTION:

Heavy Slash

Emphasizing the streamlining of aviation needs of the Pacific war, airplane production will be cut 30 per cent during the last six months of 1945 and an additional 15 per cent during 1946, the army air forces revealed. According to unofficial estimates, the 30 per cent reduction this year may result in release of about 200,000 workers in a dozen cities.

Because of the long distances involved in the Pacific warfare, longer range bombers, fighters and transport planes will remain in large production, the AAF said. In this category are the B-29 Super-Fortresses, the P-47 Thunderbolts and P-51 Mustangs and the C-54 transports.

Since less and less American air craft were lost in Europe as the Luftwaffe was worn steadily down, many planes used in the European war will be available for combat in the Pacific theater, the AAF re-

NEAR EAST:

Trouble Brews

Long noted for her friendly relations with native populations, France found herself deeply embroiled with Syria and Lebanon at the eastern end of the Mediterranean over the subject of establishing military bases in those countries after granting them independence,

Even as the U.S., and Britain stepped into the picture in an effort to smoothen the difficulties, Syria proceeded with a fevered recruit ment program in preparation for a clash with the French, whose nationals hardly dared to appear in public for fear of being mobbed. Though the question of bases shaped as the nub of the disagreement, the immediate cause of unrest lay in the arrival of French re-enforcements presumably bound for the Pacific war. The natives, however, looked upon their presence as a move for exerting pressure for granting France greater concessions.

Because Arab disaffection in Syria and Lebanon could lead to widespread uprisings against western powers in Palestine, Egypt and elsewhere in the east, the U.S. and Britain worked anxiously for an agreement to avert hostilities.

Hoover also suggested that cost of the program be borne by international contribution.

Charged with the task of saving 700,000 Belgians from starvation in World War I, the relief commission Hoover headed purchased food in the open markets with funds from various governments and private relief agencies and operated 200 ships. To assure prompt and efficient distribution overseas, boats, railroads, flour mills, bakeries and slaughter houses were taken over on the con-

Get Priorities

In conformance with President Truman's instructions, the War Production board has assigned high priority ratings to critica needed for the rehabilitation of liberated European countries.

Thus far, $170,000 of pumping equipment and pipe to relieve a serious water shortage in Athens, Greece, has topped the list of items, with $5,000,000 of drainage material for flooded Holland also receiving high ranking.

Besides being allocated 625,000 tons of carbon steel for the first nine months of this year. France also has been authorized to procure 700 locomotives and 10,000 freight cars. Another 180 locomotives have been scheduled for shipment to eastern Europe. In addition to military vehicles released on the spot, liberated countries also will get 11,000 commercial trucks.

RECIPROCAL TRADE: Passes House

With President Truman declaring that he would not use his increased authority to endanger any segment of American industry, agriculture or labor, the house passed legislation extending the reciprocal trade act for three years and granting the chief executive power to cut tariffs 50 per cent under existing levels.

Bitterly opposed by the Republican delegation, the bill was approved by a 239 to 153 vote after defeat of a motion to send the measure back to the ways and means committee for deletion of any provisions broadening the President's power over tariffs. In bucking the amended act, GOP members asserted that additional tariff reductions would invite a flow of cheap goods to this country, with the Democrats countering with the argument that the administration program was necessary for postwar economic cooperation.

Under the reciprocal trade act, 32 agreements have been negotiated with 30 countries for mutual tariff reductions, with the terms of the law providing that any such cuts be automatically extended to other friendly countries. Because tariffs may be pared on specific items chiefly produced by individual countries, however, the effects of the automatic extension to other nations have been limited, it was said,

Cooperation for Peace Based on Compromise

Nations Must Yield Some Sovereignty to Lend Helping Hand Against Threats To World Security.

> By BAUKHAGE News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, If she will not, it is largely a matter of ignorance as to what that Washington, D. C. sacrifice involves. And who makes SAN FRANCISCO. - The tumult the sacrifice? The people them-and the shouting dies, the captains and the kings depart, still stands Thine ancient sacrifice - an humble and a contrite heart. . . . so said Kipling in describing the end of a war ("far-called our navies melt away.") As I review this chapter of current history here at San Francisco where the world security organization is in the making, I am impressed with one thing: what has already been achieved containing merit and the seeds of hope for a peaceful world has been achieved by the sacrifice offered by the humble and contrite hearts.

That sounds somewhat idealistic perhaps but let me explain.

I think it is not an exaggeration to say that compromise is the keystone of harmony whether it is a question of interpersonal, interparty, interstate or international relations. And what is compromise but sacrifice?

Applied to the United Nations conference on international organization, sacrifice of national aspiration, and compromise which meant yielding actual selfish advantage of the moment in the hope of gaining potential advantage for the general good, have at least given evidence of good will. Good will, implemented by popular endorsement, means practical progress toward peace.

Natural Than War

You may have read a very trenchant article by Emery Reves, authority and writer on international affairs in the current Mercury magazine, which confutes the argument that since war is a part of human nature, it can never be prevented. Mr. Reves goes about his task of disproving this convent bromide of the pessimist in a highly scientific manner. "Why," he asks, "did cities once wage war against each other and our home state to sovereignty under why do they no longer fight each other with weapons today? "Why, at certain times did great landowner barons war with each ther and why have they ceased the practice? "Why did the various churches plunge their adherents into armed warfare and why today, are they able to worship side by side without shooting each other? Why did Scotland and England, the author continues, and other parts of what are now single nations, once fight and now live together peacefully?

Reves points cut that these and other groups, presumably because it was the nature of the beast to once consider it natural to decide their differences with tooth, claw, powder and shot, or bow and arrow and yet that kind of legal murder no longer exists and would horrify modern man.

This is his answer to these provocative questions: "Wars between these social units cease to exist the moment sovereign power is transferred to a larger or higher unit." That is worth pondering.

Yield Sovereignty To Higher Community

The sovereign power of the cities yielded to the power of the nation; England and Scotland yielded their separate sovereignty to the sovereignty of the British crown. This occurred as a part of the due process of civilization which began when the individual cave man agreed to abide by the rules of the tribe, the tribe submitted to the will of the community and so on until the process produced the United States. Here is a vast area occupying a huge sector of a great continent, which, after a bloody war where state rights versus federal authority was the issue, became a unified whole. Hates, rivalries, competition, religious and economic difference continue (as a part of human nature) but internecine strife is unthinkable. Where's the rub, then? Just, "suvereignty" which is a fighting word, still today. The United States is willing, anxious to participate in the United Nations organization - the people have given that mandate to both parties. But will she yield her sovereignty? If so, how much?

"No, no-that ain't what I mean," Thingan cut Stocker off with almost frantic impatience. "He said he could lay hands on the express box in less'n a minute, didn't he? And right after that he makes a kind of a false start-but not toward the door-and he says, 'the box is right

"You're wonderful," Stocker said sourly. "Pick it up, then, and let's .go." He slacked his grip on Melody's arms experimentally, then, as Melody stood there, let go the prisoner's elbows. But he kept a purchase on Melody's belt.

Thingan paid no attention to him. "He was standing right over here," he began, taking position in imitation of Melody.

"Over what? He never said." "Over here, you fool! That's what he meant!

"All right then." Boone blared at him, "he says 'Over here, you fool,' meaning you, I guess, and moves toward the blank wall. Hell! Let's get on with the way we was doing. Hold him, Mormon."

Both Stocker and Thingan ignored this. "Boot in that door!" Thingan ordered, indicating the root cellar.

Boone obeyed. The door, being unfastened, banged wide. Thingan caught up a candle, and both he and Royal Boone jammed into the root cellar, virtually at once. Thingan and Royal Boone came piling out of the root cellar again. Thingan stood pulling at his lower lip, his eyes so avid as they searched the room that he looked drunken. "Full this up," he ordered, kicking the bunk. Roy Boone tore the bunk out by the roots in a couple of splintering heaves. Nothing was under it but a considerable rat's nest, and a litter of such trash as had found its way

Melody saw that Cherry had sidled nearer the door; she could almost reach it, from where she now stood, if reaching it would have done any good. You could always get to that door, but you could never get through it. "Still figuring," Melody thought, "still trying. She never gives nothing up . . ."

Royal Boone was methodically testing the packed clay floor, under the place where the bunk had been, chipping at it with his high heel. But now Sheriff Roddy Thingan whirled upon that deep window embrasure in the adobe wall. Light had come to him, sudden and complete. He laid hold of the great slab that covered the cache, and heaved . . . Nothing happened.

Incredibly, without any reason, the slab stuck where it was. Thingan tried a few more wrenches, this way and that, but nothing gave. "Ain't no use heaving at that," Roy Boone said. "It's all sewed down with cobwebs."

"You figure," Mormon Stocker said with insult, "the old man can't even tear a cobweb up?"

Them cobwebs been there for years," Boone explained, in vacuous good faith.

"You don't tell me," Stocker said. Thingan's voice was low, quickbreathed and shaky. "Work on him, Roy," he said fervently. "Work on him! I'll have him talk or-" Roy Boone stepped gladly toward Melody, but Mormon Stocker swung Melody out of the way. "Stop it!"

Stocker said. "Stocker, if you've gone soft-"

"Too slow," Boone objected. "Try it," Thingan decided, "Try it anyway." Fear of defeat was riding him. "We got to take a chance on it. Git some wood in, Roy. A little otter do it."

For a moment Roddy Thingan sat on the edge of the shifting slab, a strange blank expression making his face sillier. Then the slab let go altogether, and thundered to the floor. The sheriff slid with it, sitting down hard and suddenly at the base of the wall. He sat there idiotically for a moment, his legs spread wide in front of him, one pants leg hitched up to his knee.

He turned quite slowly, as his brain almost visibly began to move again. He sighted the black cavity the falling slab had revealed. In a curious, unhurried way, he craned his neck to look into it..

Then suddenly he was scrambling frantically to get to his feet, his hands clawing at the wall to help himself up. His voice exploded in a bawl.

"They's a dead man in there!" A strangled grunt sounded in Mormon Stocker's throat as he dropped Melody and plunged toward the cache. The voice of Royal Boone rang out strong and crazy; he was already beside Sheriff Thingan, crouched over the black hole in the adobe something, in this emergency. Instead, a soft answering whistle sounded in a different part of the scrub; and when he shook off the first fantastic impression that his horse had whistled back at him, he knew that Cherry had answered him. He ran toward her, trotting stiffly to keep his high heels from turning his ankles; but she didn't whistle again, and he couldn't find her. He did find the ponies, though, Monte's carbine was still on his saddle, so that he was armed again now, and mounted. He left two of the ponies tied there, and scouted aimlessly through the manzanita, wondering what was sensible.

Far-off up the mountain, perhaps a mile and three furlongs away, a double pistol-shot sounded, as two guns fired almost together.

Monte Jarrad sat well back in the shadows as George Fury walked into the ring of the firelight. Monte's gun was in his right hand, where it rested across his knee. The gun was

"Soft hell! You ain't getting no | cocked, but it swung nose down idly, not raised.

Monte looked at George Fury in a puzzled way tinged with admiration. This was mainly because he didn't understand how George got here, let alone how he dared come here to begin with.

'Who sent you?" he asked without expression.

'I come on my own," George said. "How'd you find this?" "It's a reasonable question." George admitted. "I figured you was up here," was your shot killed Luke Packer.

"Dead, is he?"

"Plenty." Monte Jarrad grunted noncommit-

"I already figured out you was wownded. So I knowed you wouldn't travel fur. And I knowed you'd be cold, like any wownded man. So I look in the near places where a fire could be hid, and here you be."

"Smart-maybe," Jarrad said. "Uh-huh. My name is George Fury,"

"I know who you are. You're the old buck that's been palming himself off as my uncle.

"And you're the cheap gun-fighter that has framed up a sap of a boy to take your medicine for you,' George said.

Monte Jarrad looked him over with some puzzlement. George Fury did not look dangerous enough to face Monte Jarrad with a comment like that. He wore one boot and one sock frazzled to the shape of a spat. He was hatless, and his thin hair was full of leaf-twigs, and other trash. His knees were muddy and his shirt torn.

"I don't look nothing like your half-wit uncle," George said.

"What do you want here?" Monte asked him now. The question carried a strangely detached curiosity, as if Monte Jarrad had already decided what disposition he was going to make of George.

"I come here alone," George be-"I know that. I been listening to but he let it pass. "The sheriff and some of his posse are already down there at your cache. That's what that shooting was you heard." Monte Jarrad's eyes showed a sharpened flicker as George used the word "cache." But he only said, "I figured that."

"They ain't found your express they do find it, they'll find Luke Packer's body. Because I loaded the corpus in there, on top of your dang box,"

"How did you find it?" "The gal showed us."

Monte Jarrad watched him with imusement, and a faint admiration. "So they caught that there imitation of me," he said.

"Seems like so," George Fury admitted. "I thrashed around and tore some of 'em up, and come away. But Melody's no way quick, in a thing like that. Not quick, and not lucky. He seems lucky, many a time, but he ain't. So they still got him by the neck, I judge. In a little while more they'll find your dang cache, and when they do, they'll find the corpus of Luke Packer. About then, them Cotton friends of yours are due to show. So now they got Melody Jones four ways from the ace; he ain't got no more show than a one-laiged buck at a pants-kicking."

"You don't mean to tell me," Jarrad said, greatly entertained.

"Yes," said George Fury. "And you took all this trouble, just to come up here and tell me

"I come here to make a reasonable demand," George said, biting off more jerky. "This here boy is only a boy, and he ain't got the sense he was born with-that's a living fact. He don't know which is up, or what the score is, or what's good for him. I'm the first to admit all that, and freely tell him to his face, for his own good. But leave

"Make it short," Jarrad said, He readjusted his position, moving carefully, as if his wound might be stiffening again.

"There ain't a mean hair in that boy's head. He never done no harm to nobody in his life, nor thunk of any. He's in this because of you, and because your gal hauled him into it, and made out she needed him to help her. You and her rigged up all this between you. So there ain't but one right thing you can do, now. You got to whistle up your bullies, and go and get him out of this."

"This beats me," Monte Jarrad said. His breathing was quickened and broken by a silent laughter. "Git to your feet," George said, chewing.

Monte Jarrad stared up at him, unbelieving; but the twisty laugh-ter left his face as if he had been struck

ANSWERED BY THE VOICE & PROPHECY INTERNATIONAL BIBLE BROADCASTER

Question-Does the Bible say that the mind has any effect on the body?

Answer - Certainly, "A merry heart doeth good like a medicine: but a broken spirit drieth the bones." Proyerbs 17:22.

Q.- I am a backslider. Will God ever take me back?

A .- Just as soon as you repent and return to Him. "Return, ye backsliding children, and I will heal your backslidings. Behold, we come unto Thee; for Thou art the Lord our God." Jeremiah 3:22. "I will heal their backsliding, I will love them freely: for Mine anger is turned away from him." Hosea 14:4.

Q.—Were there any song writers in Bible days?

A.-King Solomon wrote 1,005 songs. [1 Kings 4:32.] Q.-Can you give me the name of the world's first city? A .- Cain "builded a city, and called the name of the city, after the name of his son, Enoch." Genesis 4:17.

Q.-Do you believe in FALLEN angels?

A .- "And the angels which kept not their first estate, but left their

Q.-Why do some people call angels spirits? A.—Because the Bible does. "But to which of the angels said He at any time, Sit on My right hand, until I make thine enemies thy ing spirits, sent forth to minister for them who shall be heirs of salvation?" Hebrews 1:13, 14.

Q .- Isn't Russia the "red dra-A .- In Revelation 12 the "great red dragon" of verse 3 is clearly the same as "the great dragon" of verse 9, which we quote: "And the great dragon was cast out, that old serpent, called the Devil, and Rev Eleanor B Forbes has chos- Satan, which deceiveth the whole world: he was cast out into the earth, and his angels were cast out with him." Q.-A minister says there is a temple in heaven. I say, "No, heaven is a condition." What do you say?

A .-- The Bible says: "And the temple of God was opened in heaven, and there was seen in His temple the ark of His testament: and there were lightnings, and voices,

AS THE battle lines approach the heart of the enemy's homeland, the fighting grows fiercer . . . and more costly in men, materiel, and money. That's one reason why every red-blooded American must back this mighty 7th War Loan with every dollar he can lay hands on. Another reason is that this is really two drives in one. In the same period last year, you were asked to invest in two war loans, as against one this time. No need to tell you that War Bonds are the safest and best investment in the world. So pour out your might, Americans, in the MIGHTY 7th War Loan. Let's show our valiant Fighting Men that we're backing them to the limit of our means . . . 100%.

This is one of the many postwar cases that demands the ultimate in self-control, patience-and humor. Yes, I mean humor, for Margaret is taking this much too hard. It is impossible to undo in a day or a week, or even a year, the mischief done by war conditions and home compromises.

Ruling Classes of Japan Hold Support of Hirohito Air Power and Emperor Worship

To Play Big Role in Jap Defeat

By Walter A. Shead WNU Staff Correspondent.

Editor's Note: This is the second of three articles dealing with the all-out was

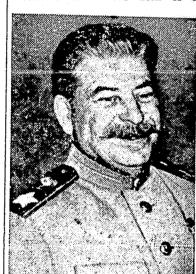

How long Japan will hold out against the power of American might in the Pacific, depends largely upon our attitude toward Emperor Hirohito, the Son of Heaven.

Shall the emperor be eliminated, or shall we continue to hold him sacrosanct, undisturbed in Kyojo castle with its broad acres and moated walls close to the center of Tokyo?

Incendiary bombs from our B-29s have burned out thousands of the nomes of his humble subjects within sight of his castle . . . a few bombs even struck the stables in the emperor's grounds. But the policy of our state department and the military up to this point, at least, has been to spare Hirohito. Our propaganda heaps no villainous names upon Hirohito such as we did upon Hitler and Mussolini.

And yet the Japanese militarists take no move without the sanction of their emperor. Indeed, Hirohito is depicted as a tool in the hands of the militarists, but every official deed of the Jap government must have the sanction of the emperor. Jap citizens are taught that the most noble act of their lives is to fight and die for their emperor.

To the Japanese people their emperor is divine, although his divinity has only been in existence during the last 70 years, a ready-made divinity sold to the people by propaganda of the ruling classes. This state worship, which is a religion, in Japan is a mixture of Shintoism, nature worship, some Confucianism and remnants of ancestral worship China. It was born of a

Josef Stalin.

He determined Russia's policy. political need following the revolution of 1868 when the leaders of the revolution restored the emperors to power and needed some binding influence to bring together the fighting clans and tribes of the country. So they invented the religion in which the emperor emerged as divine, a supreme being,

Ruling Class Beat Hitler in State Worship

As a matter of fact the ruling classes of Japan who are comparable to the junkers in Germany, beat Hitler to the punch by a half century on this question of state wor-

And so it has been the policy of our government to go slow on the matter of the emperor . . . whether propaganda or military attacks on would take on the nature of a religious war and increase the fanatacism and resistance of the Japanese people . . . to just "wait

But at any rate, this worship of the emperor as God by the Japanese people plays an important role in how soon the struggle in the Far East will end . . . with the word of Hirohito as the final authority, the Japs will fight on to the last man until that word for unconditional surrender comes from his lips.

Military leaders here believe that air power will play even a more important role in the Japanese war than it did in Germany for two reasons: (1) because Japanese war industries are largely centered in three main districts around Tokyo, Kobe and Osaka and on the southern island of Kyushu. Japan has not had time to decentralize her industries and to turn from one industrial area to another as Germany did. Much of the Jap war industry is subcontracted by thousands of small plants each employing only a few workers and one source declares there are 45,000 of these tiny home many after the last war.

factories crowded together in Tokyo alone. The fire hazard is much greater in Japan for few of their industries are housed in modern buildings and flames cause vastly more destruction than in Germany; (2) it took us more than three years of bombing over Ger-of bombing operations and our accurate technique, and, during that time, Germany was able to go underground and disperse her war industrial operations. It has only been about five or six months since we dropped our first loads on Japan and the very suddenness of our big scale attacks and the terrible destruction has given the Japs no time either to prepare adequate defenses or to disperse their indus-

It is believed here that at least on the Japanese homeland, destruction of Jap war industries can be virtually complete with air power alone. We underrated the Japs however, at the start of this war on many counts, and there is no actual and factual knowledge on how large a scale Jap war industries are being operated in Manchukuo or in China proper held by the Japs for the past seven or eight years.

Russian Participation Offers Problems

The question of Russian participation in the war against Japan of course is uppermost as this is written. Informed sources here agree that a declaration of war against Japan is the only way in which Russia may participate in peace terms and realize her fondest dreams of opening up her gateway to the Pacific, and the development of her richest territory . . . Siberia

. . by eliminating the threat of Japan on her eastern coast from Vladivostok north along the whole coast line of the sea of Okhotsk. As a matter of fact it is no secret concentrated along the USSR-Manchurian border and that Japan has pinned down thousands of her own troops in this stolen puppet state by fear of the concentration of Soviet forces nearby. Russia could attack Japan disastrously from her bases at Vladivostok, which are closer to Japan than London is to Berlin, Atthe same time Japan could never reach the heart of Soviet industry, far away in the Urals and western Siberia, even with long-range bombers, for they are about as far from Japan as Japan is from New

At the same time Russian ground forces operating against the Japs in Manchuria, and Russian bombers operating from the many new air bases which she has built in eastern Siberia during the past few years, could riddle Japan's war industries in Manchukuo. Almost daily, and particularly since Russia gave notice of cancellation of her diplomatic pact with Japan on April 25 and which expires a year from that date, Russian official organs are becoming openly more hostile to Japan and recent pronouncements of Premier Stalin give rise to the belief that Russia intervention may have been discussed at the Yalta conference.

With the Allied powers agreed on the dismemberment of Germany to prevent her ever becoming capable of making war again, the question arises, once the Japs are licked, what kind of a government will be established in this ambitious troublemaker in the Far East. Insofar as Japan is concerned, the question of the emperor again arises. Unlike China, Japan has had little or no practice at self-government. Only a small quota of the entire population has ever taken part in any liberal movement such as the formation of a Jap federation of labor, a tenant farmers' union or in political parties. It may be that the nucleus of these movements in Japan could be used to create the conditions of a democracy in Japan, by keeping in mind the fate of the Weimar republic in Ger-

Division of Territory Offers Problem

What will Britain do with Singapore and Hong Kong, British Malaya, Burma and India? What will the Dutch do with her rich empire in the Netherlands East Indies. And perhaps more important, what will happen in China as the one eastern nation which has fought for and maintained its independence and gained acceptance as one of the Big Four of the world?

China is beset with economic and political lils. She cannot stand alone. She is threatened with revolution. Although she had made a vallant fight, if she does not prove her ability to constitute herself a democratic country, then it will strike a blow at the democratic concept throughout the Far East. It will make more difficult the establishment of a Japanese democracy. With Ernie Pyle in the Pacific:

Fleas and Mosquitoes Vie to Keep Men Awake Far Into the Night

OKINAWA.—One of the most miserable damn nights out of hundreds of miserable nights I have spent in this war was Bird Dog Clayton, and Gross and I, turned into our sacks just after dark. So did everybody else who wasn't on guard. It was too early to go to sleep, so we just lay there in the dark and talked. You could hear voices faintly all over the hillside.

We didn't take off our clothes, of course; nobody does in the field. I did take off my boots but Bird Dog and Gross left theirs on for they had to stand watch on the field telephones from 1 till 2 a. m.

The three of us lay jammed up against each other, with Bird Dog in the middle. We smoked one cigarette after another. We didn't have many to develop our latest scale to hide them under the blanket for we were in a protected position where a cigarette couldn't be seen very far.

Right after dark the mosquitoes started buzzing around our heads. These Okinawa mosquitoes sound like a flame thrower. They can't be driven off or brushed away.

I got a little bottle of mosquito lotion out of my pocket and doused my face and neck, though I knew it would do no good. The other boys didn't even bother.

After a while the hillside grew silent. The hours went past. By an occasional slap at the mosquitoes each of us knew the others weren't Suddenly Bird Dog sat up and pulled down his socks and started scratching. Fleas were after him. Even the grass has fleas in it over For some strange reason I am immune to fleas. Half the boys are

We all laughed under our ponchos while he stood there in the moonlight and stripped of every stitch, even though it was very chilly. He shook and brushed his clothes, doused them with insect powder and then put them back on.

This unfortunate soul was Cpl. Leland Taylor of Jackson, Mich. His nickname is Pop, since he is 33 years old.

Pop is a "character." He has a black beard and even in the front lines he wears a khaki overseas dress cap which makes him stand

After Pop went back to bed everything became quiet for several hours, but hardly anybody was asleep. The next morning the boys on guard said that Pop must have smoked three packs of cigarettes that night. It was the same way with Bird Dog, Gross and me.

Once there was a distinct rustling of the bushes in front of us. Of course the first thing I thought of was a Jap. But then I figured a Jap wouldn't

Tribute to Fellow Writer

This is a piece about Fred Painton, the war correspondent who dropped dead on Guam a short time

Fred wrote war articles for Reader's Digest and many other magazines. He even gambled his future once writing a piece for the Saturday Evening Post about me.

Fred was one of the little group of real oldtimers in the European war. He was past 49 and an overseas veteran of the last war. His son is grown and in the army. Fred had seen a great deal of war for a man his age.

He was just about to start back to America when he died. He had grown pretty weary of war. He was anxious to get home to have some time with his family.

But I'm sure he had no inkling of death, for he told me in Guam of his postwar plans to take his family and start on an ideal and easy life of six months in Europe, six in America. He had reached the point where life was nice.

Fred Painton was one of the mod est people; I mean real down-deel modest. He had no side whatever, no ax to grind, no coy ambition. He loved to talk and his words bore the authority of sound common sense. He had no intellectualisms. His philosophy was the practical kind. He was too old and experienced and too wise in the ways of human nature to belittle his felcussing all night long around the low man for the failures that go with trying hard

Fred didn't pretend to literary genius, but he did pride himself on a facility for production. He could get a thousand dollars apiece for his articles and he wrote a score of them a year. And his pieces, like himself, were always honest. I've known him to decline to do an assignment when he felt the subject prohibited his doing it with complete honesty.

Fred's balding head and crooked nose, his loud and friendly nasal voice, his British army trousers and short leggins were familiar in every campaign in Europe.

He took rough life as it came and complained about nothing, except for an occasional bout with the censors, And even there he made no enemies for he was always sincere. There were a lot of people Fred didn't like, and being no introvert everybody within earshot knew whom he didn't like and why. And I have never known him to dislike anyone who wasn't a phony. As the war years rolled by we have become so indoctrinated-into sudden and artificially imposed death that natural death in a combat zone seems incongruous, and almost as though the one who died had been cheated.

Fred had been through the mill. His ship was torpedoed out from under him in the Mediterranean. Antiaircraft fire killed a man beside him in a plane over Morocco. He had gone on many invasions.

He was in Cassino. He was ashore at Iwo Jima. He was certainly liv-Bradshaw, who was sleeping with ing on borrowed time. To many it seems unfair for him to die prosaically. And yet. . . .

The wear and the weariness of war is cumulative. To many a man in the line today fear is not so much and anguish and utter horror that precedes death in battle.

I have no idea how Fred Painton would have liked to die. But some-how I'm glad he didn't have to go through the unnatural terror of dying on the battlefield. For he was one of my dear friends and I know that he, like myself, had come to

After a long and hard struggle, the Germans have been pushed to the brink of overwhelming defeat and the end of the war in Europe is now clearly in sight.

"Happy as I am that my country will soon be able to live in peace, again, much remains to be done before Japan is fully beaten. Aside from the additional campaigns which will be needed to obtain military victory in the Pacific, there is also the human factor to be considered in that other peoples of the Far East eagerly await to be freed from the enemy. We Filipinos know only too well from experience what it means to be under Japanese domination.

"One of the outstanding feats of the war has undoubtedly been the effective fashion in which the United States has overcome the formidable obstacles of distance in supplying the Pacific. Large quantities of supplies' will be needed, however, to deliver' the final crushing blows against a ruthless and fanatical enemy. All of us can make certain that these supplies are available for our armed forces by giving enthusiastic support to the Seventh War Loan Drive.'

Job Calls for More Pulpwood

Paperboard cartons and special containers of many types; moistureproof wrappings and other packing materials made from pulpwood are needed in vast quantities. This, in addition to the already huge consumption for plastics, explosives and other war uses has made the pulpwood shortage more acute than ever and has put pulpwood close to the top of the War Production priority list. We have a long way to go before the Japs are ready for Unconditional Surrender. We must not let up on our war job 'til they are beaten!

Pulpwood production is a profitable business now, and it will be a good business in war or peace for many years to come.
